Mysterious Sultana in German East Africa

A Mysterious Sultana has just been discovered in the northwest part of German East Africa. By Lieut. Col. von Ritter, chief of the German Red Cross, in the town of Kumasi, the Sultana was found to have been buried alive in a mound. The mound was discovered by a native who informed the German authorities, and a search was immediately made. The Sultana was found to be alive, and was carefully removed from the mound. The mound is believed to have been the site of a battle between the natives and the Germans, and the Sultana is thought to have been a native who was killed in the battle. The Sultana was buried alive, and was found to be in a state of rigor mortis. The German authorities are making every effort to protect the Sultana from further harm.
